

Regional Workshop
Towards more effective systems of asset and interest declarations

Beirut, Lebanon, 29-30 June 2022

Programme

Overview

In cooperation with the Lebanese National Anti-Corruption Commission, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) is organizing a regional workshop entitled Towards more effective systems of asset and interests declarations which will be held in Beirut, Lebanon on 29 and 30 June 2022. This workshop is part of UNDP's regional project on Anti-Corruption and Integrity in the Arab Countries (ACIAC), which is implemented in partnership with the Korean International Cooperation Agency (KOICA).

The existence of an effective system for asset and interest declaration is an essential pillar of good governance and corruption prevention, as it helps in building trust in public officials, including those in political, legislative, executive, judicial, military and security positions, and enables the monitoring of their assets and interests and managing them in a way that prevents conflicts between private and public interests. These systems also facilitate the role of concerned authorities in detecting illicit enrichment cases, and thus improve the accountability process. Indeed, the United Nations Convention against Corruption mentions in article 8 that "Each state party shall endeavor, where appropriate and in accordance with the fundamental principles of its domestic law, to establish measures and systems requiring public officials to make declarations to appropriate authorities regarding, inter alia, their outside activities, employment, investments, assets and substantial gifts or benefits from which a conflict of interest may result with respect to their functions as public officials." This is also emphasized by various international recommendations and experiences around the world.

The use of technology in designing and implementing declaration systems plays an essential role in facilitating the process of verifying and auditing the public officials' assets electronically and allows for enhanced accountability and trust. However, because these systems are often met with skepticism about personal security and privacy, there are emerging challenges on the best ways to deal with and verify those large amounts of information and link them to other state records and related databases.

To delve deeper into this important topic and to shed light on good practices and experiences in the Arab region and other countries, the legal frameworks and the practical experiences of relevant reforms that have been adopted in the past few years, including in Jordan, Lebanon, Kuwait, and Tunisia, will be presented during this regional workshop. In addition to highlighting the experience of other countries, such as Greece, in establishing and implementing their own electronic declaration systems. The event is expected to conclude with a series of reflections on good practices and strategies that will guide governmental actors responsible for designing and implementing asset declaration systems in their respective countries, in line with international standards and the specificities of country contexts.

The regional workshop will be attended by representatives of anti-corruption agencies, regulatory bodies and ministries working in this field in the Arab region, in addition to specialized regional and international experts. The workshop will be held in hybrid format with part of the participants attending in person and another part online via the Zoom platform. The languages used will be Arabic and English with simultaneous interpretation available. Documents and photographs will be made available at the event's page on the website www.undp-aciad.org.
