WHY IS IT IMPORTANT? (2)

The Negative Impacts of Corruption

5. Corruption reduces trust in an economy. It may be harder to attract foreign investment. (FDI)
6. Corruption increases the risks of contracts not being honored, which again could impact FDI.
7. Corruption means that officials will often divert public investment into capital projects where bribes are more likely.
8. Corruption often means that officials turn a blind eye to regulations, such as those involving construction and the environment.

Article 6. Preventive anti-corruption body or bodies

1. Each State Party shall, in accordance with the fundamental principles of its legal system, ensure the existence of a body or bodies, as appropriate, that prevent corruption by such means as:

(a) Implementing the policies referred to in article 5 of this Convention and, where appropriate, overseeing and coordinating the implementation of those policies;

(b) Increasing and disseminating knowledge about the prevention of corruption.

2. Each State Party shall grant the body or bodies referred to in paragraph 1 of this article the necessary independence, in accordance with the fundamental principles of its legal system, to enable the body or bodies to carry out its or their functions effectively and free from any undue influence. The necessary material resources and specialized staff, as well as the training that such staff may require to carry out their functions, should be provided.

3. Each State Party shall inform the Secretary-General of the United Nations of the name and address of the authority or authorities that may assist other States Parties in developing and implementing specific measures for the prevention of corruption.

Kuala Lumpur Statement on Anti-Corruption Strategies

Kuala Lumpur, 21-22 October 2013

On 21-22 October 2013, high level representatives of anti-corruption authorities as well as national planning authorities from the South, East and Southeast Asia and anti-corruption experts from around the world gathered in Kuala Lumpur at the invitation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), in partnership with the Government of Malaysia, to discuss a set of Guidelines for Anti-Corruption Strategies, that could instruct the process of developing, designing and implementing sustainable anti-corruption strategies.

The participants included several officials of anti-corruption authorities, other anti-corruption practitioners, and representatives from national planning authorities, and executive, legislative and judiciary branches. Representatives of UNDP, UNODC, the World Bank, the ADB/OECD Anti-Corruption Initiative for Asia and the Pacific, Transparency International and U4 Anti-Corruption Resource Centre also took part in the proceedings.

The participants reviewed and discussed country experiences from around the world, with a particular focus on South, East and Southeast Asia, relating to the process of developing anti-corruption strategies, the design and content of anti-corruption strategies and the monitoring and evaluation of anti-corruption strategies.

Recalling the United Nations Convention against Corruption (UNCAC),¹ which in its Articles 5 and 6 obliges States Parties, in accordance with the fundamental principles of their legal systems, to develop and implement or maintain effective, coordinated anti-corruption policies that promote the participation of society and reflect the principles of the rule of law, proper management of public affairs and public property, integrity, transparency and accountability,

Recognizing that anti-corruption strategies can provide a comprehensive policy framework for actions to be taken by States in combating and preventing corruption, a useful tool for mobilising and coordinating efforts and resources by governments and other stakeholders, for policy development and implementation, and for ensuring monitoring of policy implementation,

Considering that a number of countries in South, East and Southeast Asia have implemented anti-corruption strategies or are in the process of drafting new strategies and revising old ones,

Recognizing that there are a large variety of models and approaches to the development of anti-corruption policies and strategies and common lessons to be learned from experiences in developing these strategies in the region,

Anti-Corruption Priorities in the MENA region

UNCAC Coalition Submission to the 9th UNCAC Conference of the States Parties

26 November 2021

The UNCAC Coalition member organizations from the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) welcome the convening of the 9th UNCAC Conference of the States Parties in Egypt. The Conference is a unique opportunity to adopt ambitious resolutions and recommendations that will advance the fight against corruption, especially in the MENA region, where many countries struggle with high perceived levels of corruption.¹ The following submission, developed through an open consultation with several MENA organizations in our network, outlines our priorities and proposes ways forward to support the efforts of governments and civil society to reduce corruption in our region and improve the quality of life of its peoples.

The state of corruption in the MENA region

The scourge of corruption in the region has undermined trust in public institutions, impeded economic development and has negatively impacted people's exercise of fundamental rights, which is especially true for marginalized communities.

Given the extent of corruption in the MENA region, its reluctant acceptance among parts of the population as well as its transnational complexity which often hinders the investigation and prosecution of the perpetrators of crimes, developing effective and preventive anti-corruption policies and fighting against impunity remains the most promising approach to combat corruption in our countries.

Our priorities for combating corruption in our countries

1. Fostering the rule of law and good governance practices, within legislative and institutional frameworks, remains the main preventive mechanism against corruption, as it builds an environment that deters corruption and creates a societal culture hostile to it. Thus, formulating and implementing appropriate and effective national laws that are in line with international conventions, especially the United Nations Convention against Corruption (UNCAC) must be a top priority for governments in the region. In doing so, legislative bodies should strive to achieve a maximum degree of conformity with UNCAC provisions, including by addressing any shortcomings and recommendations that were identified in the country review reports for the first and second UNCAC review cycle.

DFID's Anti-Corruption Strategy for Sudan

January 2013

Introduction

1. Corruption can broadly be defined as the abuse of entrusted power for private gain. The word can cover a whole range of abuses. On one level it can refer to the risk of taxpayers' money in DFID programmes being fraudulently spent or stolen. On another level it can refer to corruption within a country and its institutions, with the negative impact that this has on development prospects. DFID sets the highest standards for the manner in which its own money is spent. Through its development programmes, DFID also works to reduce the prevalence of corruption in each of its partner countries.
2. In November 2011, the Independent Commission on Aid Impact (ICAI) reviewed DFID's approach to tackling corruption. It found that DFID had a good awareness of the fraud risks and seeks to safeguard UK funds through appropriate choices of funding channels and programme design, and often played a leading role within the donor community on anti-corruption work. It did however recommend that in any country assessed as having a high
