Overview

On the occasion of the International Anti-corruption Day, that is commemorated worldwide every year on 9 December since 2003, the UNDP Amman Regional Hub will host a regional event on “The Future of Anti-Corruption and Integrity Reforms in Arab Countries in Light of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development”

Panellists will include senior public officials and leading civil society activists from various Arab countries, with representatives of stakeholder groups, prominent researchers and specialized journalists in attendance. The panel shall provide an open interactive space to share updates on emerging trends and current challenges, focusing on legislative priorities, good practices and lessons learned in preventing and combating corruption, including through cooperation between governments and local and regional civil society, women and youth groups.

The event will also witness the launch of the “KOICA-UNDP Regional Project on Anti-Corruption and Integrity in Arab Countries” that will be implemented over the next four years. Responding to external and internal pressures, an increasing number of Arab countries are adopting national anti-corruption strategies and establishing specialized anti-corruption agencies and/or related multi-agency mechanisms. In this framework, UNDP designed a new regional initiative that aims to enable institutions and systems in the Arab region to address awareness, prevention and enforcement of anti-corruption measures to maximize availability of resources for poverty eradication and contribute to inclusive and effective governance that brings women, youth, and civil society groups into play, in line with Sustainable Development Goal 16 on “Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions”.

This regional project is funded by the Korean International Agency of Cooperation (KOICA), prioritizing support to Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Morocco, Palestine and Tunisia.
