Integrity = pillar of Customs Reform
Corruption in Customs

- Corruption is an obstacle to reforms
  - The positive impact of investments in technology and human resources can be reduced by corruption
  - Reforms are thought of in offices, but not always fully implemented on the ground
  - Gap between the reality in the field and what the Director General thinks is happening
  - Customs is part of a system – changes will take time
Customs is exposed to corruption in a particular way

- Direct contacts with goods, people and money
- Important decisions on duty/tax or admissibility of imports/exports
- Customs personnel often work in remote border stations
- Clearance of many goods is time sensitive
- Expectations of social networks
Negative consequences of corruption in Customs

- Revenue leakage
- Reduction in public trust and confidence
- Reduction in compliance
- Reduction in community protection and national security
- Barriers to international trade and economic development
- Increased costs borne by the community
Focuses on Customs
Partnerships
Tailor-made/long-term solutions
Integrity is part of an overall Customs modernization process

RELATIONSHIP WITH THE PRIVATE SECTOR

- Have appropriate consultative mechanisms been established to facilitate communication and co-operation between Customs/the administration and client groups?
- Have formal co-operative arrangements been established with industry bodies incorporating aspects such as the knowledge of Customs’ procedures, information exchange and two-way training?
WCO Integrity strategy

Awareness raising

- International/regional/national events
- Integrity self-assessment workshops
- Integrity Sub-Committee (meets once a year)
- Integrity Newsletter
Empirical approach and performance measurement

- Not relying on subjective data but on quantifiable information
- Detect bad practices which can be connected to, or support corruption and impact on the Institution’s objectives (revenue collection, security, enforcement)
- Using data extracted from Customs clearance systems, measurement, and performance contracts between Customs leaders and frontline officers.
- Indicators to measure the economic activity from a Customs point of view, the time taken by Customs officials and brokers to process files, the effectiveness of controls and of “so called” sensitive procedures and compliance with the Customs channels
Comprehensive Customs reform
Stakeholder’s perception survey revealed a negative image of Customs
10 MOUs on Ethics and Transparency with Customs partners (Customs brokers, Free zones, exporters, express carriers, International road transport associations, etc.)
Signed by the Director General of Customs and the heads of the associations
Regular meetings between Customs and the associations
Results: legal action taken – improved dialogue with the private sector – increased transparency
Projects in the MENA region

- Morocco - Integrity pilot project (Monitoring center) – risk mapping
- Egypt – Integrity self-assessment
- Algiers - Research conference on performance measurement
- Tunisia – Integrity self-assessment
No one size fits all

- Customs is part of a system
- Some change is possible with the right ingredients and the implementation of realistic measures
- Integrity should be a pillar of any Customs reform
